

bear

Oh give me cheese, lots of cheese

★★★★★★

Posts: 4,138

Member is Online

yesterday at 1:07pm

Quote

questions

questions questions

and more questions

but no one listens

or understands

they sit in front of a screen

all day long

surfing for an answer

they need to unplug

and get back to nature

'cause like dylan sang

all of those years ago

"the answer is blowing in the wind"

Copyright ©2019 Don Tyson

The poem “questions” is written by my fellow poet from Missouri Don Tyson it’s my honor to recite his well worded poem which inspired me to write “True Source” an answer to his questions. Thanks Don, for lightning my muse this is my gift to you.....your friend from Texas Roland.....

puddles1947

Oh give me cheese, lots of cheese

★★★★★★

Posts: 2,410

Member is Online

16 hours ago

Quote

Edit

Thanks, Don, for getting my muse up and running, your well worded poem lit a match and got me going.....Roland.....

True Source

Sometimes questions that blow in the wind go nowhere may come with a calling and a message of hope if one takes the time to listen and share especially when one is at the end of the rope so questions must be taken with loving care could mean the difference in the ending of life for no man is an island we're set on a course life is not easy it's hard and comes with much strife between multitudes of answers will find our true source.....Roland.....07/09/22.....